Getting around Whitehorse

Whitehorse has a relatively small downtown core. If your accommodations are downtown, you may not need transportation to get to other downtown venues such as the Start Line, Yukon Quest events, and more. However, should you need it, there are taxis and a local transit system available.

Getting to and from checkpoints in the Yukon

Trucks and cars are the ideal option if you choose to travel between checkpoints in Yukon. The roads are more difficult in the winter given the ice and snow and the darkness poses additional complications. However, there are a number of places to refuel along the Klondike Highway (Highway connecting Whitehorse and Dawson) and a number of accommodations available to tourists or volunteers, but remember to book early! Hotels along the trail fill up quickly so if you have not made a reservation be prepared to sleep in your car. A more detailed review is available in "Services and Driving Information for Yukon Checkpoints".

By air

There are no commercial flights to Braeburn, Carmacks, or Pelly Crossing. However, there are flights between Dawson City and Whitehorse with Air North: 1-800-661-0407

By public transportation

In 2016 Black Bear Wilderness Adventures will offer transportation between some of the checkpoints on the Yukon side of the race as well as a 4 day trip to Dawson City. For prices, schedules and other details please contact Black Bear Wilderness Adventures Inc. at (867)-633-3993 or 867-335-0461 and check their website www.wildernessyukon.com

Driving your own car/ rental vehicle in the Yukon

If you are bringing your own vehicle or renting a car, access to the checkpoints is relatively simple, however distances can be long and road conditions can be difficult. Please use caution on the roads. Please note: vehicle rental agencies are only available in Whitehorse. Please make sure the vehicle is equipped for severe winter conditions: winter tires, ice scraper, spare tire and extension cord. Also make sure to inform the rental agency where you plan on driving so they can alert you to any vehicle limitations.

We recommend: Budget Car and Truck Rental
